The Origin of Beer.

In a jolly field of barley good King Gambri-

"Now list to me, ye heathen gods, and eke, ye Christian, too,
Both Zernebock and Jupiter, and Mary, clad in blue;
And mighty Thor, the Thunderer, and any class that bo.
The one who aids me in my need his servant I will be."

And as the staful heathen all in the barley

lay,
There came in dreams an angel bright, who
soft these words did say;
"Arise, thou poor Gambrinus, for even all around
In the barley where thou sleepest a nectar may be found.

"In the barley where thou sleepest there hides a nectar clear,
Which men shall know in later times as porter, als or beer."
Then in terms the most explicit he "put the the monarch through,
And gave him ere the dream was out the recipes to brew.

Up rose King Gambrious and shook him in

"Away, ye wretched heathen gods, with you I'm quit and done!
Ye've left me with my subjects in error and in thirst;
Till in our dreadful dryness we scarce know which is worst.

It was the good Gambrinus unto his palace

And messengers through all the land unto his lords were sent.

"Leave Odin, under pain of death!" His orders were severe,
Yet touched with mildness - for he sent the recipe for beer.

"At the Bijou, commencing next Monday afternoon, Mariande Clark and a strong dramatic company will present Floreme Geraid's dramatization of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." Mr. Clark's rendition of the difficult role is strong in its smallest details. His changes from Dr. Jekyll to Mr. Hude are made in full view of the audience, without the aid of optical illusions and with all the lights up. The play is full of dramatic situations and climaxes, all of which are brought out excellently.

A $30,000 Fire.

A clerk in Strasburger Bros.' shoe store, 310 Seventh street, discovered fire in the cellar about 4 o'clock yesterday afterneon, and a moment later the flames burst into the store-room. An alarm was sent in by John Morton of No. 2 Fire Company, who was passing the store, and when the Fire Department arrived they found the rear of the store enveloped in flames. The cellar was filled with packing boxes and other combustible material. The plateglass windows were broken by the heat, and the firemen, after half an hour's work, put on sufficient water to check the flames, which threatened to communicate to Silverberg's toy store. The building, which is owned by Samuel Fowler, was damaged to the stock is estimated at $20,000, on which there was a moderate insurance. 310 Seventh street, discovered fire in the

there is scarcely a team that would have him for a gift this year.

President Nimick of Pittsburg has signed another pitcher, Knell of the Greenhoods and Moran of the California League. Pittsburg paid $4,000 for the former and will give him $1,300 for balance of scason. Knell's record this year is a fine one. He has pitched 12 games in which he was at the bat 34 times, made 17 hits, 12 runs, 8 put outs, 15 assists, and 2 errors. In these 12 games he struck out 117 men and gave 21 bases on balls. The opposing batsmen hit him safely 38 times, an average of only $3.18 hits per game, and earned only one run. He is a left hander and with a season in the League it is thought he will be as effective as Morris. Knell will probably pitch his first game against Washington. He will arrive in Pittsburg next Wednesday.

While all this talk about Anson's great success in developing players is going the rounds, why not say something about his failure? asks the Chronicle-Telegraph. Can it be said that he made a success out of Tebeau, Pyle, Hanrahan, Sprague, Hoover, Geiss, Clarke and Flynn? It cannot be. The truth of the matter is, Anson picks up the best young blood, and out of perhaps a dozen gets one or two good ones. He is not afraid to give a promising man a good salary. His greatest finds have been Ryan, Daily, Farreli, Krock, Baldwin, Sullivan and Petitt, and a great deal of Anson's success in handling men is that they are afraid of him.

The Professor invites the tadios. especially at this season of the year, to have their hair shampood and clipped. The clipping does not mean the long hair, but the short, which every lady has, but apparently they are not aware of its utility until it is clipped. The secret of the clipping process will be cheerfully explained by the Professor and the Madame. No tady need fear ever becoming bald if they follow the advice of these two tonsorial experts.
